TAISHAN Marigolds

A Marigold blooming on Chinese New Year's Day means the home will be lucky!

Why Taishan (African) Marigolds.....

In the tradition of the New Year, Chinese families will decorate their homes with flowers, oranges and tangerines (symbols of abundant happiness). Red, yellow and orange are the central colours throughout the festival. Flowers represent new life and rebirth and in Chinese tradition they are symbolic of wealth and a prosperous career.

In Australia, with the seasonal differences, African (Taishan) Marigolds are one of the flowers of choice for an Australian Chinese New Year. Traditional belief is - a plant blooming on New Years Day means the home will be lucky!
